SUNNY DAYS AHEAD: JUMP INTO GARDENING THIS SPRING Glendale Offers Free Container Gardening Class

GLENDALE, Ariz. – Do you have a small yard, but still want to exercise your green thumb by growing herbs and vegetables? Do you want to get the most out of a small amount of irrigating water? If you said yes, then you are ready for the world of container gardening where you can successfully grow your own food in small and sunny spaces. Learn about best practices for growing plants in containers by attending the free Container Gardening class on Wednesday, February 10 from 6 - 7:30 p.m. at the Glendale Main Library (5959 W. Brown St).

Experienced and enthusiastic gardener, Vynnie McDaniels, will guide you through getting your container gardens off to a good start and keeping them successful in in our sunny climate. Learn how container gardening differs from in-ground gardening, the benefits, and how to make your container garden thrive all year. Find out how a little water goes a long way in a container garden. This class is great for novice gardeners who are “digging” into the soil for the first time, as well as more experienced gardeners that are looking for a new gardening method.

Sponsored by the Glendale Water Services Department, this class is part of the City’s free “Green-Living” series to help residents create a more water- and energy-efficient home. Classes are free, but advance registration is required by calling 623-930-3760 or emailing greenliving@glendaleaz.com. You do not have to be a Glendale resident to attend. For more information, visit www.glendaleaz.com/green or call 623-930-3535.
