Glendale's 2012 Year in Review. 2012 was a busy year, with many accomplishments and successes for the city of Glendale. Below are a few of the highlights.

New Mission for Luke Air Force Base – After spending nearly three years building regional and statewide community support for the new F-35 mission at Luke Air Force Base, Luke Forward officials were thrilled with the announcement from the U.S. Department of Defense that the Glendale base will serve as the Air Force's new F-35 training center.

Valley's Largest Retail Development from this Year Attracts Millions of Shoppers to Glendale – Tanger Outlets Westgate opened many brand-name stores just steps away from Glendale's Sports & Entertainment District. This project started on a fast track with a two-day design collaboration between the city's project team and the developer's design team, which usually takes between four and six months. With a groundbreaking in March, the Building Safety Department accelerated the permitting process, which helped Tanger meet its opening date in November. The upscale outlet center has approximately 330,000 square feet of retail shops with the potential of an 80,000-square-foot expansion from the first phase of the project. The development, with the creation of more than 900 full and part-time retail management and sales positions, is expected to attract up to 15 million shoppers a year and generate an estimated sales tax revenue of $2.5 million a year.

Follow Your Money – The city unveiled "Follow Your Money," an online tool that allows residents to track city spending and revenues. This user-friendly, searchable site serves as a single point of reference for citizens to view information about the financial activities of the city. The program, available on the city's website, allows users to view spending by department and vendors, along with tracking revenues by fund. The tool has the ability to break down each department's individual expenditures for fiscal years 2010-2013 and the information is updated daily.

“Fire a Shot, Get Caught.” As the New Year draws near, the Glendale Police would like to remind the public that random gunfire is not only extremely dangerous, but it is also a felony offense.

Shot-Spotters are the sensors that are strategically placed throughout the city to detect and locate gunfire. The Glendale Police slogan from the inception of the Shot-Spotter program has been “Fire a Shot, Get Caught.” Those who are caught will be arrested and could face a punishment of more than five years in prison.

While we want our residents to be excited and enjoy ringing in the New Year, we encourage them to do it safely and responsibly. The Glendale Police Department urges anyone who hears or observes someone firing a gun to call 9-1-1 immediately and report the crime to police.
