City of Glendale Legislative Link Update
May 23rd, 2025

Today marks the 131st day of the legislative session, with a total of 1,806 bills, memorials, and resolutions introduced to date. Of those, 351 measures have been transmitted to the Governor's Office, with 214 signed into law and 138 vetoed. Governor Hobbs is still currently 5 vetoes away from breaking her record in 2023 with 143. The House got back to work on Tuesday, May 20, moving through eight bills before hitting pause again. They're set to return on Wednesday, June 4. Meanwhile, the Senate is scheduled to reconvene next Wednesday, May 28, likely just to handle a few bills before syncing up with the House the following week. There's chatter that the state budget might finally drop during that window—especially with a handful of House members heading out soon for the "Arizona Political Wedding of the Year" in Lake Como, Italy. No budget spreadsheets have surfaced just yet, but with roughly three weeks left in session, lawmakers are starting to draw their lines in the sand and work the phones to lock in support.
