Cory Celaya's Work on Display at Glendale Adult Center

GLENDALÉ, Ariz. – Mixed media artist Cory Celaya's work is currently on display at the Glendale Adult Center, 5970 W. Brown St., through July 28. Her works encompass watercolor, mixed media collage, encaustics (hot wax painting), faux resin techniques for art objects, jewelry and much more.

In making her art pieces, Cory, as she likes to be known, uses drawings, photos, images from magazines and newspapers, printed text, numbers, stamps, transfers, hot wax, paint, glazes, handwritten text, letters, bills, receipts, tags, sewing patterns, sheet music, wallpaper, envelopes, junk mail, catalogs, tickets, menus, announcements, invitations, documents and many other items, including her grandson's sonogram. Her friends will give her bags of "stuff" because they know she can probably do something with it.

"All this stuff makes me happy, and happy is what 'moxie art' is made of," says Cory.

A Peoria resident, this artist is passionate about teaching and creating art, whether it is a large painting or a small piece of art to wear. She teaches classes locally in her Catlin Court studio in downtown Glendale, plus nationally and internationally.

Cory may call her work "moxie art," but she has plenty of moxie herself!

Call 623-930-3755 for more information. There is no charge to view her display.
