GLENDALE CITY MANAGER RECEIVES ECONOMIC ENGINE AWARD

GLENDALE, Ariz. – Whether it is the announcement of a new stadium, the creation of new, high paying jobs or the development of a new retail center, Glendale City Manager Ed Beasley oversees it all.

For these accomplishments, and much more, Beasley was recently recognized as an Arizona Business Magazine 2006 Economic Engines of Arizona Honoree.

Chosen from hundreds of nominees from around the state, Beasley was recognized for contributions to the Arizona economy, his commitment to the public and his visionary leadership style.

“Ed Beasley is a natural leader who understand the role and responsibilities that come with being one,” cites the October-November issue of the magazine.

Since becoming city manager, Beasley’s leadership has helped the city develop Glendale’s Sports and Entertainment District, which includes the Glendale Arena, Cardinals Stadium, Cabelas, Zanjero, and Westgate developments.

In addition to his efforts at the city, Beasley is also involved in many community organizations, including Maricopa Association of Governments, International City/County Management Association, Greater Phoenix Economic Council, youth sports groups and others.

Beasley is featured in the October-November issue of Arizona Business Magazine.
