GLENDALE 11 AND GLENDALEAZ.COM TEAM UP TO HELP RESIDENTS “GO GREEN”

GLENDALE, Ariz. – Everywhere you turn these days, there is information about how to conserve energy, use less gas, reuse and recycle and protect our natural resources.

In an effort to help residents manage all of this important information and hopefully make “going green” easy, the city has launched a special web page and Glendale 11 show that will simplify all of the information out there that helps save money, save time and in our own small way, save our environment.

Glendale 11 will debut Going Green in Glendale on Tuesday, July 1 at 9:30. The show will feature interviews with city experts on transportation, car maintenance, water conservation and recycling. The show will then air regularly at 8 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Glendaleaz.com/green will also launch on July 1 and will bring all of the information to your fingertips.

“Glendale 11 and Glendaleaz.com are committed to providing residents with relevant and creative information,” said station manager Laurie Berg Sapp. “With so much focus on our environment, we knew that Glendale residents would find this topic timely and worthwhile. It is our hope that these resources will help organize and simplify all the information that is out there.”

Glendale 11 airs on Cox and Quest Channel 11, 24-hours a day, seven days a week. For a complete viewers guide, visit www.glendaleaz.com/glendale11.
