Looking for Authors for a Glendale Writer's Event

GLENDALE, Ariz. – Calling all fledgling authors! Glendale Main Library, 5959 W. Brown St., is presenting a free daylong writer's conference, thanks to a grant from the Glendale Arts Commission. "Hey, I Wrote a Book! Now What?" will be held from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. on Saturday, September 30 in the library's meeting room wing.

The workshop will focus on the writer's next steps—how to publish, market and promote one's manuscript.

The day will be filled with a variety of successful authors who will share their experiences: fiction author Stella Pope Duarte; writer of western lore, Bob Boze Bell; sci-fi fantasy author Michael A. Stackpole; plus other writers of fiction, non-fiction, biography and science fiction. The event will also feature self-publishers and a representative of the small presses.

The eagerly-awaited anthology of prize-winning short stories from Glendale Public Library's Annual Short Story Contest will be unveiled. Librarian Fried Ling edited the publication, which also was funded by this grant.

Event coordinator, Anne Owens, is looking for a number of area authors to display their published books during the day. Interested authors should contact Anne at 623-930-3573.

To register for the event, e-mail aowens@glendaleaz.com or phone 623-930-3573.
